

Miss Krueger's Kindergarten Class

May 15th, 2015

Reading: We formed new reading groups again and the students like their new reading partners! We continued on this week producing rhyming words and deciding if they were real or nonsense. The students hear a retelling of The Three Little Pigs and some of them were very adamant about the wolf not saying the correct phrase. That lead us to talk about how sometimes different writers use different words when retelling the story. We read a new big book this week called The Night Worker about a boy who went to work with his dad that worked nights. They learned new vocabulary such as engineer and survey.

Writing: Most of the how to books have been binded! The class looks forward to sharing them with you on Literacy Night!!!

Math: The students started learning time this week. It has been clicking quite easily for some of them. They cut out their very own clock that is able to flip the numbers down to tell them what the exact minute is. So far, we've talked about the hour and half hour.

Science: We had the pill bugs and sow bugs out crawling all over the writing table earlier in the week. The students learned that these are called isopods and actually have 14 legs! They talked about what kind of environment you would find them in as well.

Bugs/Insects:

This week, the students looked at ants, beetles, and praying mantis. They were by far most intrigued by the praying mantis.

Literacy Night:

On Tuesday, May 26th, please join us as the elementary school has their literacy night. Our class will be reading their how to books they finished up and they look forward to sharing them. The evening kicks off at 5PM in the elementary gym. I look forward to seeing many of you there.

PALS Testing:

PALS testing went very quickly this spring! The students did an amazing job working to the best of their abilities!
